

About me

Influenced by the Theatre

Much of my photography involves theatre, whether multiple performances each year at my local high school or for the Kansas City Cappies organization. I love the drama and challenge of photographing stage performances. When I do portrait work, I enjoy working with natural light, but I also enjoy the opportunity to take a bit of the “stage” to a location by using strobes, reflectors, and light modifiers when the subject is interested in that treatment.

While the stage is rapid fire and a technical challenge, I also love the more relaxed pace of portrait sessions, whether high school seniors, babies or children, or families.
